

Beth Crist

Consultant

Beth Crist is passionate about and experienced in developing educational programs that make innovative use of technology. Her programmatic work has included online and in person teacher and librarian professional development programs, youth and classroom workshops, and a long running publication series. Applying new technologies in distance learning and online formats, she has authored and presented several statewide educational initiatives.

In addition to her programmatic work, Beth is an experienced project manager, grant and contract administrator, and certified Master Trainer. Trained in anthropology with a Masters in Library Science, her professional history includes museum outreach and educational programming, distance learning, archaeological survey work, and library management and programming.

Kaplan & Associates cultural resources researching/developing/presenting culture, nature & the arts

www.kaplanandassociates.org